READING COMPREHENSION: Below is a passage to read. Please read it carefully, and then answer five questions about it. (10%)

Passage One:

Users of the Internet must exercise caution as they surf online. As valuable a tool as the World Wide Web is for sharing information, it is also very useful to criminals who want to take advantage of gullible users. One technique, known as phishing, uses various means to get unwary web users to type their usernames, email addresses, or passwords so that the criminals can gain access to the users' personal information. They may prepare a web page that looks just like a website's login page for this purpose. However, since these people do not really work for the website's company, they cannot use the real domain of the site, so a user who carefully checks to see what the domain is can detect this sort of trick. Other phishers try to fool users into typing their bank account numbers or other secret information, also for abusive purposes. Other tricksters gather email addresses and flood their victims' inboxes with spam, a word that sometimes merely means "unwanted emails."

46. How can a web user recognize that a website's login page is actually a fake?

A. The login page looks different from the real page	B. The web address is not the same
C. The user gets unwanted email messages	D. The web user's username is incorrect

47. Which of these statements does the writer of this passage seem likely to agree with?

A. The Internet is too dangerous for users to risk using any more.	B. With care, an Internet user is sure to be quite safe.
C. Being aware and careful online can reduce risks.	D. An Internet user should never enter personal passwords or usernames online.

48. Which of the following terms is used to mean the same as the underlined term "criminals" in the article?

A. spam	B. phish	C. users	D. tricksters
---------	----------	----------	---------------

49. What could be expected to be in the NEXT sentence in this passage if this were from a website's article on the dangers of web surfing?

A. An explanation of what "spam" can mean in other situations	B. A general warning not to be careless about how your passwords are used
C. An advertisement for antivirus software	D. A list of the main types of ways that people are fooled online

50. Which of the following is a phisher unlikely to try to get from an Internet user?

A. Their email address	B. Their password	C. Their domain	D. Their username
